The Goethe-Institut Philippinen will open its doors again to the public and take everyone on a trip to discover Germany's language, art, culture, games and many more on 31 August from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Different activities and games are prepared so participants will get to know the work of the Goethe-Institut in Manila.

Among them is the free German Language Crash Course, where participants will learn the most popular and iconic German folk dance moves and a beer and sausage festival.

Aside from that, the Goethe-Institut will be treating participants to a free German books from the bazaar at the Institute's library.

To make it more exciting, the institute will also give away a free trip to Germany and other prizes through a raffle for participants in their activities and games.

The winners will be announced at the end of the day and before the start of the afternoon concert that will cap the event.

The Goethe-Institut Open House is open and free for everyone! Registration for activities starts at 10 a.m. Goethe-Institut Philippinen is located at the Adamson Centre, 12 Leveque St., Salcedo Village, Makati City.
